

Does the thought of leaving your newborn home to work over 40 hours a week cause anxiety?

Do you feel like your worth more than your 9am-5pm?

Tired of making money for someone else?

Did your boss just take credit for the new procedure you devised?

But most of all, did you miss your child's last sports game or dance recital because you just couldn't get the time off?

If you contemplate leaving the corporate world or have already done so, you are not alone. You are among a growing number of women who are tired of sitting in a cubicle or behind a desk while wondering about their children, their dreams and their future. They are tired of the rigidity of corporate life where they have to beg for time to be with their children.

In this book, you will find everything a mom needs to know to understand her own value and to prepare for the challenge of becoming a highly successful Mompreneur. Imagine mastering the skills to create an extraordinary business, become an expert, enjoy family time, and create a lifestyle that works for YOU.

Corporate Mom Dropouts is about women who decided to trade in the Life Sentence for a Profitable Lifestyle. The book is for moms who are looking for the courage to follow their dreams and moms who need the inspiration to continue on their entrepreneurial path. This book is to help mothers and moms to be to give, if they have it to give, know what to say and say it, if you need something done, do it, if there is some place you want to go, go, if there is something you want to do, do it. That is what awaits you in Corporate Mom Dropouts: the tools and expert advice to help you realize how absolutely wonderful, special and blessed you are as woman and creator.

I was motivated to start my own enterprise when my last boss refused to let me take off a day to stay home with my ill son, Khallid. What ever your own individual circumstance-- the economic downturn or a passion you wish to follow --read the individual adventures, business strategies and helpful ideas of twenty plus former corporate moms who threw out their commuting tickets and traditional corporate pant suits.

These women are designers, coaches, authors, speakers, virtual assistants, public relations, marketers, Internet marketers. The industries they work in may vary. However, one thing's the same: These women are "movers and shakers" who now enjoy a profitable entrepreneurial professional life that allows time with their families.

©

Their stories truly inspired me to elevate my business goals and to help others become inspired also. My goal is to encourage you to also reach for the brass ring. Seek excellence in all you do while keeping your children, spouses, significant others and extended family and friends in the forefront.

This book is a call to demystify some of the questions that many of the experts in this book have discovered and now I ask you, what are you willing to do to get what you want? What are you willing to give up to unveil who you need to be? This book is written in a set of trimesters in order to express the birthing process and phases of creating a healthy and growing full term business. Towards the end of the book in your 3rd trimester, you will discover the Mompreneur within!

Lucinda Cross provides helpful tips, and a careful consideration of

This is some of what the book covers:

- The Wonder woman Routine
- Swiper No Swiping "The identity crisis"
- Its 7pm do you know where your mom is?
- 2 Week notice
- and much more

Lucinda Cross, author of Corporate Mom Dropouts provides helpful tips, and a careful consideration of alternatives, for women and mothers who want to pursue entrepreneurship whether you just started or thinking about starting a business. Corporate Mom Dropouts offers women the confidence they'll need to make sound decisions, first as a mom and then as a businesswomen. This invaluable reference should be on every woman's shelf.

Become inspired and follow through with your dream. Good luck on your journey. My sincerest wishes for every success... (And don't forget to recommend the book to other women friends and family members who may also benefit!)

---Lucinda Cross